REMARKS

Seay noted there is a new document in the board materials titled 5 Things to Know. She thanked Trustee Gaekwad for this suggestion as another way to strengthen trustee engagement.

Seay shared a few developments showcasing how UCF is continuing to create opportunities through innovation and partnership to develop new opportunities for students, and to help move Florida’s economy forward in these challenging times.

- A 2020 Workforce Study by Aviation Week ranks UCF #2 in critical skills needed by employers, and #1 in terms of the high volume of hires. Seay said it was noteworthy that UCF was second behind Georgia Tech, demonstrating how a young university can advance in rankings by leveraging its strengths.
- Seay said she was invited to speak to the Greater Orlando Aviation Authority Board to discuss potential partnership opportunities between the airport and UCF.

- Seay shared that an MOU between the State University System, the National Security Innovation Network - an initiative of the United States Department of Defense - and the Florida Defense Alliance, an organization within Enterprise Florida, Inc., is on the Chancellor’s desk for his signature. Seay stated that this initiative will serve to grow the talent pipeline contributing to future missions in support of national defense and federal agencies. She said she will be participating in a briefing with Governor Eric Silagy at the upcoming Board of Governors meeting on September 16th.

Seay thanked Alex and Melinda Cartwright for a very generous and personal gift they made to support several areas at the university.

Seay called on Cartwright to provide the President’s Action Report

DISCUSSION

President’s Action Report

Cartwright stated he spoke to 50 new faculty members joining UCF this fall. He also noted that last month, UCF was ranked first in Florida and sixth in the nation for the number of faculty who received the coveted National Science Foundation CAREER Grants. Cartwright said that this was a record for UCF. He congratulated the faculty, and the work of the College of Graduate Studies and Research Office for creating new initiatives that support faculty applying for these awards.

Cartwright said he also spoke with students that are both returning and new. They told stories on why they came to UCF and why they are excited to return to campus.

Cartwright presented his remaining remarks on UCF’s preparations for the students’ return, specifically in the following areas:

1. UCF Enrollment
   - Cartwright called on Paige Borden, Associate Provost and Chief Analytics Officer, to give details on enrollment monitoring.

The trustees had the following comments:

- Gaekwad asked to return to a previous item for discussion. He asked for clarification on the discussion with the Greater Orlando Aviation Authority Board. Seay and Cartwright said it was a concept right now to discuss possible partnership opportunities with the university’s modeling and simulation programs.
• Conte asked if the transfer rate will be lower due to employment rates. Borden confirmed she expects the transfer rate to be lower, but they are in contact with the students to explain financial aid options.

• McAlpin asked when the payment for the semester is due and when does it become non-refundable. She also asked the history of students who withdraw but do not pay or register and do not pay. Borden provided this information.

• Gaekwad asked about the fee structure due to a higher online population versus in person. He also asked if the loss of revenue has been factored into the budget. Gaekwad also asked if UCF is adjusting services to match the new in person population. Borden explained the difference in the distance learning fee in students in traditional online courses versus students who had in person courses moved to remote. Cartwright confirmed UCF has been monitoring and adjusting the services offered to match the in-person population. He also noted there is an increase in cost due to the additional cleaning and safety precautions due to COVID.

• Walsh said the decision to open in person was critical to enrollment. He asked Borden if students would know what their mix of in person versus online classes are by the payment deadline of September 4th. She confirmed they do except for a few courses that may still be changing on an individual basis. Walsh supported UCF defending its brand and hopes that UCF can move back to more face-to-face instruction in January.

2. Distance Learning Efforts
   Cartwright called on Thomas Cavanagh, Vice Provost for Digital Learning, to discuss how his team has prepared for the fall semester. Cartwright thanked and acknowledged Cavanagh’s efforts and the Center for Distributed Learning team for their work.

• Seay also commented that data shows that students do as well or better in classes that are designed to be online.

• Mills asked if UCF has had any inbound requests for advice or consulting from other universities, high schools or organizations. Cavanagh said historically they have, but the requests have increased since COVID. He also said training on how to use zoom is offered to UCF’s Direct Connect partners at no cost.

• Gaekwad recommended using the summer semester to offer courses and programs to international students.
Harrington noted that students are coming here to take online courses to transfer back to their institutions and that digital learning offered a three-week workshop for faculty and leaders.

3. The Campus Environment

- Seay pointed out the Emerging Issues and Crisis Response Team (EICRT) is completing what if scenarios and planning for these scenarios.

- Yeargin asked if there is concern for the financial viability for UCF’s food vendors. Shepherd said they are working with their food vendors and they are sensitive to the challenges they face. She also noted they are using GrubHub to assist with their business.

- McAlpin asked if there are backup plans in case any vendors needed to be replaced. She said that is not the route they want to take but those plans are in place.

- Martins asked what planning has been done for sorority and fraternity housing. Cartwright noted this will be addressed in the next section.

4. Student life and housing
